The Swedish army swept across Germany in the 1630s in a spectacular military campaign led by Gustavus Adolphus. The Scandinavian nation was thrust to the center of European affairs. Swedish officers wore wide-brimmed "cavalier" hats made of thick felt, manufactured from beaver fur, which was culled from the streams of Scandinavia and Russia.

Summary of the End of the War of 1812 by R. Taylor. So anxious were both governments to reach an agreement, that no mention was made of the problems that had originally caused friction between the two nations. The matter of British seamen searching American vessels was ignored, and Indian claims to land in the American west were never discussed.
