What Readers Really Do Teaching

At a garage sale a few years ago, I picked up a class set of My Dog Does My Homework, an anthology of fun kid poems. I can't find a place to buy it, but you could do the same activity with any anthology of poems or a website like www.poetry4kids.com. Each student has a copy of the anthology and the goal is to read through the book—five times.

Yes, students already ask us questions. But it has been my experience as both a classroom teacher for 24 years and a staff developer in schools for more than a decade that the questions kids ask typically either seek clarification on procedural matters (Which numbers are we supposed to do?); attempt to cut a deal (Can we write two paragraphs instead of three?); or try to detour the group from ...

I've wondered similarly about pro-lifers – if they really believe that abortion is murder, why do so many of them choose to protest peacefully and non-violently? One way to deal with this may be to adopt the deontological stance of considering certain actions intrinsically evil (as in Catholicism), but in that case you can't justify the death penalty or even basic stuff like self-defense.
