Vermeer In Bosnia Selected Writings

This collection of long and shorter articles by Weschler are exquisite examples of pattern recognition. Connecting Vermeer's Lacemaker with the Yugoslav War Crimes Tribunal, talking about the light in Los Angeles (and he's spot on with that one), detailing Roman Polanski's background, each essay in prose that makes one's heart sing, is a beautiful offering.

Weschler observes that while Vermeer painted his peaceful works, "all of Europe was Bosnia," filled with violence and atrocities. That sets the tone for the book, an examination of modern people and events viewed from a variety of perspectives--historical, cultural, religious, philosophical, political, literary, artistic.
