Before lying down, dogs often circle their beds or wherever they've chosen to settle in for a nap.

Why Do Dogs Walk in Circles Before Lying Down?

Walking in circles before lying down to sleep is quite uncommon, but some dogs will do this. It seems to be instinctive behavior; dogs in the wild may circle around to check, by sight and smell, if there are any predators around. They may also trample down the vegetation to create a suitable resting place.

Why Does My Dog... Walk in Circles Before Lying Down?

Why Does My Dog... Walk in a Circle Before Lying Down? Your dog's ancestors had to sleep outside, in the elements, without much warmth or safety. Walking around a spot was a way to stamp down grass, leaves or snow and create a soft, level surface — something akin to carving out a nest.

Why Does My Dog Circle Around Before Lying Down?

Walking in circles before lying down has no negative effect on your dog, and is actually done to help protect your dog against potential threats, unlikely as they may be in your living room. Contacting a behavioral specialist or dog trainer would be your best approach to learn more and correct this behavior if it is something that bothers you.

Circling Before Lying Down. When a dog is getting ready to take a nap or to curl up for the night, he walks in circles as a way of getting his bed ready (even if the bed is just the middle of a floor). This behavior is linked to the dog's wild ancestors. Wild dogs and wolves had to stomp down foliage to make a comfortable area for sleep...
