Visual Studio includes a debugger that works both as a source-level debugger and as a machine-level debugger. It works with both managed code as well as native code and can be used for debugging applications written in any language supported by Visual Studio. In addition, it can also attach to running processes, monitor, and debug those processes. If source code for the running process is ...

Thanks Amr. Actually, your timing was great as your response confirmed the solution I had cobbled together. Due to the number of devices (6), I created a class for the device, placed the buffers and DataIn in that class as well as the pHandle, Serial and related stuff, and created a list to add and remove the elements with plug and unplug respectively. That way I don't mix up data streams ...
