maybe this'll help, let me know... In VISTA the max rate was 5.9 but in Windows 7 its 7.9. I found an strange issue with this though. When i ran it, i see i got 2.9 for my Hard disk which was odd, so i did a google search and found that u have to go to device manager and choose your HDD and then go to its properties and Uncheck Enable Write Caching on Drive.

This article is a guide on how to fix the problem with DVI monitors showing no signal when Windows Vista starts. Does your monitor turn black (blank) and display no signal when Windows Vista (also Windows Server 2008) finishes the green progress bar in the boot process, right the second it turns the Num Lock on?

Hey guys. So recently my computer has been running great, but as of late its been black screening (so far twice). The first was a few days ago, I stepped out of my room to go downstairs for a while and do some things and when I came back I noticed that my monitor was off (power still on, but the screen was black).
