What is science? Science is the concerted human effort to understand, or to understand better, the history of the natural world and how the natural world works, with observable physical evidence as the basis of that understanding 1. It is done through observation of natural phenomena, and/or through experimentation that tries to simulate natural processes under controlled conditions.

Some planes in the sky leave trails that persist and spread, and other planes, in the same sky, leave short-lived trails, or no trails at all. These trails are actually called contrails, short for "condensation trails". They are not smoke from the engines, they are formed when the water in jet engine exhaust (and there's quite a lot of it, like car exhaust on a cold day) mixes with wet ...

Why do some planes leave long trails, but others don't ...

The great confusion comes, according to Sánchez, when people try to use science to prove or disprove the existence of God.

Contemporary philosopher David Miller mentions that other similar objections have been anticipated and answered by Popper.. The falsifiability criterion does not imply that unfalsifiable systems such as logic, mathematics and metaphysics are not parts of science. Contrary to intuition, unfalsifiable statements can be embedded in—and deductively entailed by—falsifiable theories.

(August, 2003) Although the structure of DNA is the same throughout all species of plants, animals and microorganisms, each individual organism looks different. This is due to the order in which DNA base pairs are sequenced. Not only does this order make you a human rather than a dog or a daffodil, it also makes each person unique. Sequences of DNA differ from person to person, but every cell ...
