Whole Brain Teaching For Challenging

By Elizabeth Sautter M.A. CCC-SLP. How many times have we, as parents and teachers said to our children, "Pay attention!" or asked "Why aren't you listening to me?" in a not-so-nice tone of voice. We assume our children understand how to listen and what we mean by those words. When they don't respond, it can be incredibly frustrating.

Left-brain oriented learners tend to like structure, focus on details, enjoy organization and logic, and are able to express themselves with words. Memorization comes easily, and left-brained learners tend to learn best by repetition. These children work effectively with a step-by-step sequential approach, like to work independently, have a strong sense of time, and are objective.
