Scientists have discovered that a mysterious human species lived on the Tibetan Plateau long before modern humans. Not only does this prove that humans lived on the Tibetan Plateau tens of thousands of years earlier than what we believed now, but it also means that the first humans to cope with extremely harsh environments were not modern humans, but Denisovans.

The antiproton,  $p$ , (pronounced p-bar) is the antiparticle of the proton. Antiprotons are stable, but they are typically short-lived, since any collision with a proton will cause both particles to be annihilated in a burst of energy. The existence of the antiproton with  $-1$  electric charge, opposite to the  $+1$  electric charge of the proton, was predicted by Paul Dirac in his 1933 Nobel Prize ...
