Just to be clear from the very beginning: This is not going to be a Torvalds-ish rant against C++ from the point of view of die-hard C programmer. I've been using C++ whole my professional career and it's still my language of choice when doing most projects. Naturally, when I started ZeroMQ project ...

Why should I have written ZeroMQ in C, not C++ (part I ...
None of that stuff is any definitive proof that one project is more active than the other, but it is interesting to look at stats. As I understand it, both of the leads work on the languages in whatever little free time they have, as they both have other major new projects they are working on.
